Ms. Terrie Moffitt, Professor of psychology, Institute of Psychiatry, King’s College London, United Kingdom

Ms. Terrie Moffitt is mainly interested in the area of antisocial violent and criminal behavior and in particular her work focuses on human development. Among her main concerns belong the problems of depression, psychosocial and the drugs abuse among criminal offenders. Her expertise introduces us into the problematic of behavior of people in trouble with the law and their health and social situation. She also explains the effects of this difficult situation on their physical and mental health. Besides, Ms. Moffitt distinguishes two kinds of criminal offenders, the early once and the latecomers, and she describes their different models of life that are the principal causes of their troubles with the penal system. At the end, she introduces us a new field, called developmental criminology, which is a branch of the criminology department. [+]
