

Ashley Fritha Shearar, PhD

Ashley Shearar has been involved in both New Zealand and South Africa's criminal justice systems since 2002 as a researcher, volunteer, practitioner and policy analyst. Prior to that she was a humanitarian aid worker involved with community based mental health projects for people affected by armed conflict. Her research interests are in the benefits and feasibility of applying restorative justice principles in practice, particularly in the youth justice system.